KING PIG

Once upon a time there lived a King who absolutely adored eating pork, so the Queen often worried: «My dear, if you keep like this, you might become a pig yourself!». Just outside, a little piglet was rebelling to his fate: «What do we live for if after all we end up being served at the dinner table...?».

Pigs, royalty, a philosophical question and tons of outlandish comedy gather in this masterfully-written farce by Meinderts and Urberuaga, two heavy weights in children's literature.

THE GREEN HILL

«Over the green hill there was a hen.
What was on the green hill? A hen.
Over the green hill there was a turkey.
What was on the green hill? A turkey and a hen...».

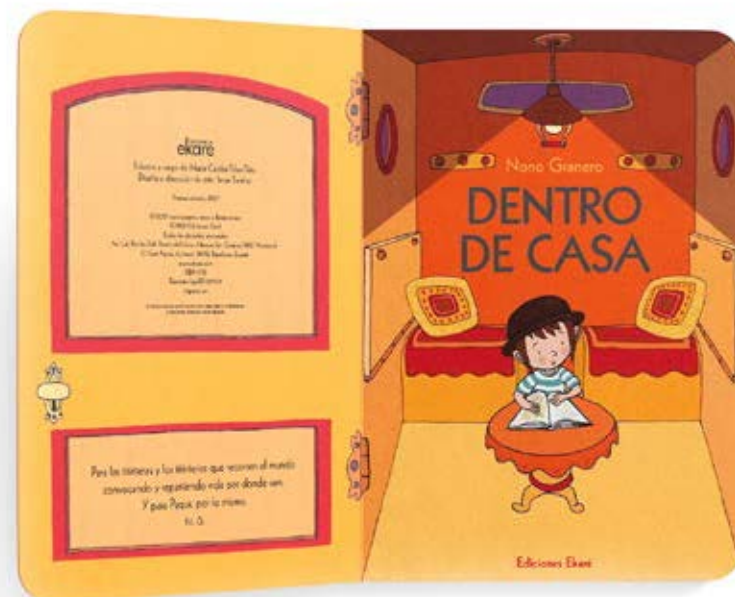

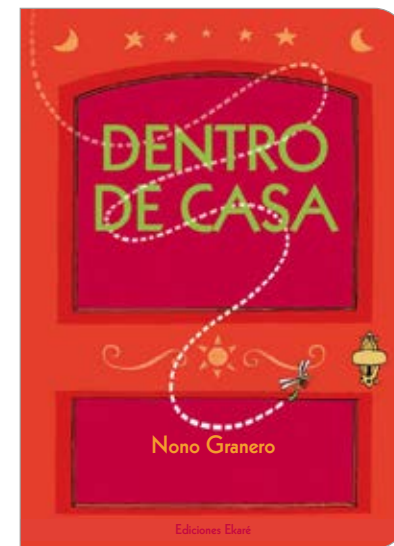

All characters want to go up the green hill.
But what's going on up there? A colorful accumulative story to repeat once and again.

INSIDE HOME

First it was a mosquito... He somehow got inside, so the kid opened the door. But then, two spiders came in.
And then, three pigeons. Four hares, five bats, six sheep... When is it ever going to end!?

A funny cumulative story for the laughs of all readers.

THE CAPYBARAS

Every day is the same, there's plenty of food, everyone knows their place. That is, until the capybaras arrive. They are many, they are big, they are different, they are here.

When these foreign animals arrive, there's no doubt. No. There is NO place for them.

SAME AS MY VERSE

Poetry as a manifest of non-conformity towards the world, towards being, aesthetics, questions and verses to shake young readers in their seats, from National Literature Award laureate, Armando Uribe.

«They say: Look at yourself in the mirror.

I say: I have.

They say: Oh, vanity, what were you looking for?

But my word I give

I didn't saw me.

And it's the reason I was looking for myself».

Everyday thousands of children in rural areas of Colombia, China, Kenya and all around the world must walk long distances and through all sorts of obstacles to get to school.

9 KILOMETERS

A boy leaves home for school. 9 kilometers is a long way to go, but he sets off. It's still dark outside and as he goes through different landscapes, he sees nature waking up. His steps are short: but long enough to get him there.

THE DIFFERENT ONES

The children whose families won the war bring plenty of lunch to school: bocatas and tortilla with chorizo. Also, when they ask them what are their fathers' jobs, they don't have to lie or feel scared. That's not the case for Paquito and Socorro. Peace and quiet have returned to their lives: but they're certainly not the same as before.

A boy and a girl tell this bright, authentic journal about children after war.

AMALIA'S FLAG

Amalia is the best seamstress in town, as everyone knows. So it's only natural that they put her in charge of sewing the town's flag for the upcoming festivities, but making a flag for all is quite a challenge.

One flag after the other, Amalia meets with an out-of-the-ordinary solution for everyone.
